

REBELS TO PARDON AMERICAN FIGHTERS WHO SURRENDER

Spanish War to Continue 'Til Victory Comes For Insurgents

STATES GEN'L FRANCO

Tells of Value of Airplanes and Tanks in Miniature "World War"

(Note: Americans fighting with Spain's Loyalist forces will be pardoned and sent home if they surrender to the Rebels, but the civil war will continue until victory comes to the Insurgents. These are but two of the vitally important statements made by Rebel Generalissimo Francisco Franco at Salamanca in a dramatic interview with H. R. Knickerbocker, ace International News Service Correspondent. The first of two articles by Mr. Knickerbocker on his interview with Franco follows. The second will be published tomorrow.)

SALAMANCA, Spain, Apr. 22—(INS)—Americans serving the Loyalist forces of Madrid will be pardoned and sent home if they surrender, Rebel Generalissimo Francisco Franco declared to me today in the most significant interview he has granted since the Insurgent siege of the Spanish capital began six months ago.

Half a million Spaniards have been killed or wounded in battle or behind the lines in the bloodiest civil war in modern history.

But it will have to continue without compromise until victory comes to the Nationalist forces, Franco declared in his first interview since the fighting in the Guadalupe region.

Franco, for the first time, authorized publication of his account of the happenings of that engagement along the muddy roads and fields between Guadalupe and Sigüenza, which Madrid forces celebrated as a triumph but which the Generalissimo dismissed as a "non-existing victory."

With this statement Franco swept away hopes aroused in Madrid that the Guadalupe engagement might have weakened his will to victory.

At the same time, his categorical rejection of peace by negotiation exposed the futility of expectation that the Guadalupe affair, plus prolonged duration of the war, plus the non-intervention blockade, would bring about defeat of Franco's forces.

To these declarations of international importance, Franco added his own personal comments on the value of airplanes and tanks in this "miniature world war," which must be of keenest interest for students of modern warfare.

Franco, wearing a simple uniform without decorations or insignia save the crossed swords of a general on his cuffs, looked fresh.

His step was springy as he leaped up from a desk piled with maps to meet me in a big room in the bishop's palace here where the General has his headquarters.

His eyes had the same luster as when I first saw him early in August in Seville, when his troops were advancing ten miles daily in the drive toward Madrid.

Nobody there imagined that eight months later the war would still be in full swing, with such a number of combatants on the casualty lists, which by now have touched practically every family in Spain.

Dramatic Romance With Music Comes To Bristol

"Swing High, Swing Low," the dramatic romance with music which comes to the Grand Theatre Thursday and Friday is a brilliant love story masterfully directed and high-lighted by good music, dancing and gorgeous settings.

It is also a picture with many pleasant surprises for movie-goers. Battered Carole Lombard, who is co-starred with Fred MacMurray, sings and dances in the film for the first time revealing talents which are certain to lift her even to greater heights of popularity. MacMurray plays the trumpet, an instrument upon which he is just as adept as he is with the saxophone, and Charles Butterworth exhibits his talents as a pianist.

But even though it is well-garnished with music and glamor, "Swing High, Swing Low" is essentially a love story. It deals with a night club entertainer in Panama who falls in love with a happy-go-lucky adventurer, played by MacMurray. Through her insistence that he attend to business she develops him from a mediocre trumpeter to an international sensation.

Fame goes to the man's head and he forgets Miss Lombard. But he is made to realize that without her he can neither play nor work and he goes back to her begging forgiveness.

Morrisville Improves Jail Accommodations

MORRISVILLE, Apr. 22—Accommodations for the tired and weary traveler, as well as those who run afoul of the law and are forced to spend over night in the police station here, are to be improved. The iron slats of the bunks in the cells are to be covered with leather mattresses and the radiators are to be placed around the walls of the cells, near the floor. The radiators are now attached to the ceiling.

It is reported that on cold nights it was almost impossible to heat the cell room because of the location of the radiators. The prisoners and those given a night's lodging have been forced to sleep on the iron slats of the cots.

Chief of Police Albert Cooper states the improved accommodations are not to be construed as invitations to tramps, as accommodations will not be furnished such persons. He also made it plain that those locked up here will be fingerprinted.

BACKERS OF "FAVORITE BABIES" SCOUTING FOR VOTES NECESSARY TO WIN CUP

Alive to the opportunity that is theirs today and tomorrow, scores of active campaigners for the little boys and girls who are vying for the honor of being elected the ruling favorite after the polls close on the baby election Saturday night, are out scouring the community for new votes.

All the preliminary campaigning has not been in vain, of course, but the finish will be the determining factor for nearly 100 babies. All have an opportunity to win and all are in the battle of ballots until Saturday at 10 p. m.

"Second-Payments" Important

Where a subscription of small denomination was turned in during the FOUR-FOR-ONE period and another payment upon the same subscription is made NOW this additional payment is termed "second payment" and it will be credited with votes under the period the original payment was made.

Also, "second-payments" on subscriptions that were turned in during the TRIPLE vote period that closed last Saturday night, will count TRIPLE VOTES now. This arrangement was explained in the first announcement of the election and the plan is proving very popular with everyone who realizes that every opportunity offered to obtain votes in volume must be identified as such upon the subscription blanks when they are turned in, otherwise the election editor nor this newspaper will not accept the responsibility for the exceptionally large vote credit due them. Don't overlook an opportunity to get "second-payments."

For the little king or queen there will be that lasting honor which goes with being selected the favorite. In addition, there is the educational trust account, a $500 bank account (cash given to the parents) which grows as the years pass and which is the winner's assurance for a good start in life. And last, but by no means least, is the magnificent loving cup which will be engraved with the winner's name.

To 29 other princesses or princes, members of the court of the queen or king, will be additional cash awards, all available and all much sought after.

Saturday night will also reveal the winner of last week's prize of $100 for the greatest number of votes turned in during the week of April 12th to 17th.

Such a Saturday night has never before been contemplated in this community. The office of the election editor will be the mecca for anxious mothers and fathers, brothers and sisters, and admiring friends of the prospective winner. There will be nothing but joy and good feeling. The excitement even now is at fever pitch. By Saturday night it will have spread like wild fire and will reach into every home in this community.

ANOTHER MACHINE GUN BOUGHT FOR DOYLESTOWN

Will Mow Down Line of Bandits in Quick Time; Cost is $225

SHERIFF ALSO HAS ONE

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 22—Doylestown borough council has purchased a sub-machine gun, a type that will mow down a line of bandits in quicker time than it takes to load an ordinary gun.

The new gun, costing $225, makes the second one secured for use of local authorities. The first one is in the custody of the sheriff.

"If the undesirables know that Doylestown police are equipped with a sub-machine gun, the county seat will not be visited very often by bandits," states a member of the police committee of borough council.

A demonstration was given to the council members by a representative of the concern selling the product.

Tracing Mysterious Fires

New York, Apr. 22—Believing recent fires in New Jersey and Long Island were of incendiary origin, police today were trying to trace a sedan said to have been seen in the vicinity of the various blazes. Yesterday, Frank Cizek, Suffolk County fire warden, collapsed from exhaustion, and was burned to death while fighting a Long Island timber fire.

Stabs Woman To Death

New York, Apr. 22—A mysterious knife wielder who lurked in the lobby of the Columbia Residential Club near Riverside Drive, today stabbed a pretty young woman to death and fled. Tentatively identified as Irene Wadd, 25, the victim bled to death before her body was found by tenants of the building. Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, city medical director, discovered a deep stab wound in the girl's left leg, said to have severed a main artery. Detective Thomas Martin said: "This is a clear case of murder."

Do you need aid with your housework? Secure it through a "Female Help Wanted" advertisement in The Bristol Courier. The cost is small, and many are in search of work.

Rebels Release Bombardment

Madrid, April 22—Spanish rebel forces once again unleashed an artillery bombardment on Madrid today, while the shell-torn capital counted an estimated 50 killed and 150 wounded in yesterday's barrage.

The renewed bombardment—the eleventh consecutive day Madrid has been subjected to insurgent shelling—realized the worst fears of the city's population, already badly shaken by the terror of yesterday's battle.

Most of the shells were directed at the center of the city, causing great destruction. Many of the persons wounded were not expected to live.

Altogether, it was estimated, in the past ten days, about 175 or more persons have been killed in Madrid by rebel shells and bombs.

One of the shells fell ten feet away from a crowded trolley car. The car was riddled with shrapnel and 20 occupants were seriously wounded and four fatally.

HOUSE AND GARDEN DAY ARRANGED FOR APRIL 27

Directions Given for Trip to Montgomery Co.; League of Women Voters

PLAN OTHER EVENTS

For the convenience of those planning to attend the first of the series of Home and Garden days to be sponsored this Spring by the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters to be held Tuesday, April 27, from two to six p. m., the following directions are given. Three places in Montgomery County will be visited.

For Bucks County people, it is thought a good point to start is the intersection of the Lackawanna Trail (Easton Highway) by County Line road—not far from Horsham. Travel west on County Line a mile or more to "Graeme Park" on the left. The house is not occupied but is noteworthy as being the home of Pennsylvania's first deputy governor. The garden is not kept up but is famous for its daffodils. From there, proceed past the small Davis Grove center, on to Butler pike on which the trip is made according to Ambler. At Bethlehem Pike turn left onto it and continue past Fort Washington to Whitemarsh.

"Hope Lodge," built in 1721, is the next stop. It is near the railroad at Whitemarsh. The Skippack Pike enters the Bethlehem Pike at Whitemarsh. Proceed on Skippack for the last stop, on Lewis Lane between Skippack and Morris Road, near Ambler. This house, "Dawerfield," built in 1728, was occupied by Washington and Lafayette after the Battle of Germantown. The trial of Anthony Wayne also occurred there. The house has been restored but the garden is still incomplete. At "Dawerfield," Montgomery County League of Women Voters will serve tea to all visitors from four to six p. m.

The public is invited to attend this historic pilgrimage. Information as to cost may be obtained from League headquarters, 1725 Spruce street, Philadelphia.

The next business meeting of Bucks County League will be held May 26th at 2:30 at "Dunmuir," the home of Mrs. Fleisher. An educational program will be carried out, at the close of which light refreshments will be served and the dell will be visited. At 11 a. m., that day, the county executive board will meet at the Fleisher home to lay plans for the next year.

New officers of the county association are: Chairman, Mrs. William Stuckert, Newtown; first vice-chairman, Mrs. Clarence Pease, Quakertown; second vice-chairman, Mrs. Thomas Rags, Doylestown; third vice-chairman, Mrs. Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol; secretary, Mrs. Arthur Eastburn, Doylestown; treasurer, Mrs. George A. Walton, George School; finance chairman, Mrs. Benjamin Kirsion, Hollenc.

Directors: Mrs. Horace Effrig, Newtown; Mrs. Samuel Paxson, Solebury; Mrs. James Shellenberger, Doylestown; Mrs. William Erdman, Buckingham; Mrs. Alfred Danzer, Yardley; associate directors, Mrs. Albert Mammel, Newtown; Mrs. Harvey Funk, Yardley.

Mrs. Pease will be the county's delegate at the state convention at Altoona May 17, 18, 19.

Bucks County Day in the series of Home and Garden Days being conducted in the five Southeastern counties will be Tuesday, May 18th. Funt Hill, Doylestown; the home of Mrs. Sarah Nichols, Aqueon, and Phillips' Mill Corner are the places to be visited. A hostess committee will be at each of the three. Tea will be served only at Phillips' Mill from three to six p. m.

LEADERS OF CUBS AND SCOUTS HAVE TRAINING SESSION

"Scouts and Scouting Imply Adventure," States Wm. F. Amick

IS ONE OF THE SPEAKERS

J. Burgess Directs Principles Of Leadership Course

"Scouts and Scouting imply adventure, and romance in the great outdoors," said Neighborhood Commissioner William F. Amick, Cornwells, during his lecture on "An Adequate Out-of-door Program" for Scouting Units. It was the gathering of the Cub and Scout Leaders to take part in the monthly Scouting Training universities. It was conducted at the Bristol Presbyterian Church. Mr. Amick concluded his remarks by saying, "Camping should be year-round. The Scout expects the adventure of the out-of-door when he becomes a member."

The Boy Scouts of America have always favored a reading program for their membership. They believe it is essential that the reading of all youth should be carefully guided. Field Commissioner of Advancement Jesse Wendkos, Andalusia, spoke on that subject during the evening. It was his opinion that without reading, we would be a very ignorant people. Civilization dates back to when the first record of the races was inscribed on stone about 5000 B. C. The importance of well organized Cub Pack and Scout Troop Committees was emphasized in a talk on "Administration" by Field Commissioner William L. Schofield of Morrisville. It was his thought that Scouting should avoid having leaders who believe that "the son rises and sets in them," and who are always in the foreground. He urged the men to develop their program through the boys and remaining in the background. This should result in boys developing leadership and further their creative ingenuity.

Twenty-two men were present and enjoyed the gathering, with Field Commissioner of Training Jack Burgess of Morrisville directing the Principles of Leadership Course, Field Commissioner of Cubbing Frederick H. Schmidt, of Perkasie, "The Pack Administration Course," and Scout Executive William F. Livermore, "The Patrol Organization." Songs were led by Scoutmaster Burtis C. Tomlinson of Morrisville No. 1. The two hour session concluded with a discussion with the men to receive suggestions for future Scouting Days led by Scout Executive Livermore.

Leaders present were: William F. Amick, Cornwells; Herman J. Becker, Newportville; George Bloch, Andalusia; Charles T. Burgess, Morrisville; John W. Burgess, Morrisville; Wesley Hart, Bristol; John S. Hershey, Langhorne; Robert E. Hershey, Langhorne; James Hetherington, Bristol; Joseph Kish, Andalusia; Allen Lebo, Bristol; Charles K. Markley, Langhorne; Clyde W. Nash, Edgely; David Neill, Bristol; Herbert A. Pettit, Jr., Bristol; Herbert A. Pettit, Sr., Bristol; William L. Schofield, Jr., Morrisville; Ronald Swain, Edgely; Burtis C. Tomlinson, Morrisville; Russell H. Vandegrift, Bristol; and Jesse Wendkos, Andalusia.

Governor's Program Not To Meet Test Very Soon

By Frederick N. Polanin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Apr. 22—(INS)—Gov. George H. Earle's proposal to "modernize" the State's relief and public assistance program, it was indicated today, will not meet a floor test for many weeks to come.

The measures, seven of them, to establish a consolidated system as recommended in the Goodrich Committee's report on relief will be returned to the Senate Welfare Committee next week for a protracted behind-the-scenes battle over their provisions.

Already a bloc has been definitely established opposing the chief executive's proposal to personally appoint members of the county assistance boards which will take the place of the to-be-scrapped poor boards.

Advocates of home rule—in its strict sense of the term—led by Sen. Anthony J. Cavalcante, D., Fayette, served notice that they will not compromise in their demands that a portion of the local groups be selected by the constituencies.

An International News Service poll disclosed that there are not many differences—save minor and technical ones—within the Democratic majority over most of the program. Although, for the present, they refused to "go on record" one way or the other, most of the Democratic legislators are agreed that a new department of public assistance should be set up, that a consolidated agency should administer all forms of public assistance and relief in local districts.

LENGTHENING LIFE SPAN

Medical men believe we already are on the threshold of a day when old age will be the principal, if not the only, cause of death in these United States. That hopeful forecast is based, in part, on the fact that of the ten leading causes of death, six now are those in which age is a predisposing factor. All the causes that kill more than 100,000 a year are in that class. The foremost cause of death in the United States, heart disease—with a yearly toll of 300,000, more than double any other—is increasing at a rate three times as fast as its nearest competitor, cancer.

With old age a factor in six of the ten principal causes of American deaths, physicians say medical knowledge now available can add ten years to the average span of life and diet alone can add seven. It is noteworthy, furthermore, that seven of the world's "deadliest diseases," i.e., the diseases known to be most quickly fatal, are negligible factors in the American death rate. Five of them indeed, are now almost unknown in this country, although they have been among the world's greatest killers. These five are: Asiatic cholera, typhus, bubonic plague, yellow fever and smallpox. Two other of the deadliest ailments, streptococcus septicemia and botulism poisoning, have small death rates here. The other three deadliest ailments, lobar and bronchial pneumonia and premature births, rank sixth, seventh and eighth, respectively, as causes of death in America.

It is on the elimination of deadly contagions and on the long, slow fight of science to combat more baffling ailments that medical men base their hopes that old age, itself, ultimately will take first place as a cause of death. And if, after some centuries, old age should become virtually the sole cause of death, how long might man expect to live? Anatomists say that animals live five times as long as it takes their skeletons to attain full growth. Man's skeleton takes 21 years to grow; and five times 21 is 105, a reasonably ripe age.

BLOODTHIRSTY

When a member of Congress so far forgets himself as to suggest that the problems of the democracy can be settled by violence, we feel some what more tolerant of less enlightened individuals who express their opinion.

That does not alter the fact that the comment made by Rep. William J. Driver of Arkansas before the Rules Committee that "what we need are a few local firing squads" touches a pinnacle of bad taste.

The Congressman owes it to himself to be more careful. It is axiomatic that firing squads usually kill the wrong people. Abraham Lincoln recognized the basis of wisdom in that observation. On one occasion a friend, in whose political judgment the Emancipator had no confidence, remarked that the people were going mad, and that they would kill him and kill Lincoln.

"You are wrong about that," said Lincoln. "When they go mad they will kill me, but when they become sane again, they will kill you."

We commend the point to Representative Driver's consideration.

All chorus girls who land in the crime reports are "Follies stars" automatically. And it is well understood that a killer of high school age was "a model student who never missed choir practice."

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly

(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—If you're a woman of adventure, come on this scouting tour with us and take note of the little things that count in fashion before going on a wholesale shopping expedition.

First of all we sight the draped bodice. It's the line Alix of Paris particularly adores and one all of us designers use occasionally. Sometimes this drapery is the saving grace of a simple evening dress. We used it in a salmon-colored jersey blouse which Kay Francis wears in "Another Dawn" with a skirt and full-gathered coat of white sharkskin for day wear. In this case the drape of the blouse is contrived to look like the continuation of a cowl neckline. This bodice detail is outstanding in a year which so definitely features the tight-fitting basque waist.

Loose-hanging sleeves with wide, full cuffs are slowly gaining headway. Keep an eye on them both for coats and frocks. The tailored sleeve has been the thing for so long it is gradually losing prestige and the loser type is its logical successor. It is also in "Another Dawn" that we introduce this. Kay Francis is the wearer and the dinner dress of white pebbly crepe is accented with gold and black embroidery. The long, full sleeves also have this detail.

A material to keep in mind is black alpaca. It sounds quaint but is as modern as swing music. Its best use is in suits with rippily pleated jackets and coats with widely flaring skirts. Cut-glass buttons are an important trim. Joan Blondell uses them to button up her little silk alpaca jacket and since they catch the light like so many prisms they are colorful against the staid black.

Roman stripes are like a call to arms. They make any dull frock awake and live. We used this design on silk pique in a novel way on a dress Bette Davis wears in "Kid Gallahad," scarf that goes flatly around the neck. The simple frock is navy blue crepe and the Roman stripes are used in a with the ends even in front where little pockets are inserted. A squarish turban of the striped material is worn far back on Bette's head with this costume.

A color combination that should be noted by the woman setting forth with great purchases in mind is the desert special of sandy beige and lemon yellow. It has a tang that should intrigue any adventuresome soul.

CHAPTER XX

As Sandy stood there undecided whether to risk walking into a trap and getting knocked on the head, perhaps, or to go back for reinforcements, there came a stir in the cavern's depths. Some bulky white object took form against the black background. It immediately revealed itself as Colonel Carlton, his white clothes immaculate as ever, his splendid head of snowy hair brushed back over a forehead that was at the same time dominant and serene.

"Well, Sandy," said he, in a sonorous voice that reverberated from the rocky walls, "so you must come and see for yourself how I fare. But you and Mike would never have tracked me down if it hadn't been for that old rascal Mouse, Lord bless his head."

The Colonel was surprised to learn that Sandy had missed Isobel and Mike. While he had been following the fissure down the other side they had left the Colonel to return to where Mouse presumably was waiting, counting on meeting Sandy on the way.

"Isobel caught sight of Mike and ducked back into the crevasse," the Colonel explained. "But he happened to look around and glimpsed her. She slipped and gave a little shriek, and the good fellow must have thought she'd fallen, or that something had grabbed her. He came charging down in here ready to fight anything. Anything, did I say? Anything but a ghost. That Irishman had a bad turn."

"He is not the only one, Colonel. What's the big idea?" Sandy spoke shortly. He could see no majesty in this performance.

"I'm like Mike," said the Colonel. "Dread but one thing. In my case, family. The prospect of this visit was intolerable. I came here for peace, tranquillity. The children distress me. Sometimes Vinckers exasperates me and Jarvis' wife makes me want to whip her. I gave them quite enough the first evening, to pay their bills and start afresh. 'Thought best to hand 'em that with my blessing and farewell. Counted on their clearing within a few days. Then when they decided to stick on indefinitely I couldn't stand it. You see, I couldn't leave myself because of Mouse."

"Raw stuff, Colonel," Sandy said shortly. "For Isobel."

"Not for long. She had to get the bad news or she'd have blown the gaff. You can't fake grief. The others would have twigged. But I knew her first act on pulling herself together would be to go to the safe, and I left a note she couldn't miss. Told her the why and wherefore and where I was."

"Then she came here to see you."

"Of course. We both knew about this pretty place. Delightful, isn't it? The negroes never come here. Claim it's haunted. There are fearful groans and moans when the wind's east. Surf at the mouth of the tunnel, I suppose. Then there was a skeleton found in here years ago. Some poor devil of a maroon, likely."

"I thought you wanted Vinckers to paint your portrait. You seemed pleased pink."

"That was art, my boy. I wouldn't hang a portrait by Vinckers in the glory hold, good place for it as that may be. But it wouldn't do to let 'em see I was sore. They might have suspected I was hiding out, and stuck on to spite me."

"Couldn't you have packed 'em off. Told them you lived here for absolute privacy?"

"Yes, but dammit, lad, I wanted em to think me dead, and keep on thinking so for as long as possible. Also I was curious to see what they would do."

"If you mean about the will, I think they've done it."

The Colonel chuckled. Sandy wondered if perhaps there might not be some truth in the charges against his sanity. This looked like senile dementia.

"If Vinckers scoffed the will, that would be a joke on them."

"What else could he have got?" Sandy asked.

"Nothing much. A little cash."

"Did Vinckers attack Isobel last night. Frighten her in any way?" Sandy asked.

"Frighten her? Lord bless you, no. Why should he?" The Colonel looked surprised.

"Then why should she have made off in such a hurry. On Mouse?"

"I don't know. Did she?" The Colonel stared. "What do you mean?"

"Just an idea I had," Sandy said. He made a quick decision to say nothing more about Vinckers, his watch still running, until he should have talked to Isobel. "I'd better be going. They may be waiting for me down below."

"Well, this is not going to be for long. Mike's to bring me what I need, and I'm nicely cased here for a few days. Ray's old times..." he checked off, then added easily, "when I was a prospector. A bit of solitude is good for a man. Enables him to reflect, contemplate, examine his soul, and get in closer touch with it. I go up on the mole at night and commune with the Infinite."

Sandy wished him good morning and went out. Here was anticlimax, a let down. An absurd form of tremendous relief. There was something wrong about it. Something that did not ring true, in character with the Colonel, unless Sandy had been all wrong about that character. A king might creep into a cave to escape his enemies, but not to escape his family. It was the family that crept into the cave. Especially a family like this.

Returning as he had come, for the cavern was a cul-de-sac, Sandy met Mike who had climbed up again to look for him. He wore no grin for this farce uncovered, as out of business hours a clown is often a sage.

"You let me wander off on a wild goose chase, Mike."

"Sure Miss Isobel was after fallin'..."

"Save the fairy story for Mouse. I found the old fraud. Hiding from that band of four-flushers back there..."

"And have you wondered why, sir?" Mike interrupted.

"Not much."

"Hush money," Mike said briefly, "cannot be squeezed out as a corpse."

Sandy stared at him. "Well, there's the makings of an alibi in that."

"Vinckers was for years out in the East, sir, and may have got something on him. Sure the Colonel has the look of a villain man, and him roused. Old as he is, one would not care to crowd him."

Sandy nodded. You've rung the bell, I don't know just what a black-mailer looks like but I should say that those four back there would make a perfect composite photograph of one. The Colonel hopes to save not only being bored but black-mailed. How is Miss Isobel?"

"None so gay, sir. 'Tis plain she does not like this dodge. She did not want you to know. Only that you had found the Colonel I should have had to lie cheerful."

They had been making their way down circuitously where the going was easier than coming up. This was much longer, a semi-jungle path. Emerging from the bush they came directly on Isobel seated in the shadow of a rock. Mouse close by sampled the wild fodder in which he revelled despite its dryness as a city boy might relish infinitely the acid fruit of a wild apple tree found in the mysterious woods.

Sandy was suddenly conscious of a less clear vision of Isobel; as if this little glade were a stage setting and they were actors with a gauze curtain between. He felt embarrassed, at a loss. To remove the filmy barrier if possible he said briefly, "I found your uncle."

She rose. Her face showed signs of strain. There were shadows under eyes.

"Sorry to have given you such a bad time, Sandy. I had one too."

"Well, I suppose the Colonel knows his business. Will it work?"

"I don't know. Let's hope that now they've got what they came for they'll go."

"Do you think they'll suspect?"

"Probably not. This is so unlike him. Perhaps they're right about his brain softening. But the chances are they'll expect it to take a different form. That he'd play the autocrat but not the trickster. That's what fooled me."

"Did Vinckers threaten you last night?"

She looked surprised. "No. I didn't see him after you left except to say 'goodnight.' He went up early."

Sandy decided not to tell her about the watch, that Vinckers must have followed her. He asked merely, "How did you happen to go so quickly?"

"That was Mouse's doings. He reached in as I was writing and lifted me out through the window, then started off. I climbed on his head and let him go. I had an idea where he was taking me and thought I might as well let him carry on."

"Did you climb up there in the night, in the dark?"

"No, I waited here until daylight. I found Uncle's note when I opened the safe."

"Did you close the safe again?"

"Yes. There was nothing in it of value to anybody but Uncle, except about five hundred pounds in bank notes, and some silver."

"What about the will... and your jewels?"

"They were not there," Isobel said tonelessly.

"Did you tell your uncle that?"

"Yes. He said that I need not worry about the jewels. But he did not tell me where they were."

"But you are worrying all the same," Sandy said. He added, reflectively,—"That old safe wouldn't be hard for even an amateur to open."

"If Vinckers or Jarvis had opened it after Uncle disappeared," Isobel said, "they'd have found his note to me."

"Yes, and known that he was hiding out. But if they had stolen the jewels I should think they'd have decided to call it a job, and beat it."

"No," said Isobel, "because this act of Uncle's has killed what little fear or respect for him they had left. It makes him look in his second childhood, or worse."

PLAN ONE MEAL TO SUIT ALL AGES OF FAMILY MEMBERS

By Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)

The eternal planning and preparing of meals to please and nourish the entire family is the homemaker's bugaboo. She has to try to please all ages from sonny to grandpa.

The conscientious woman, who plans her meals to include what the children need, will find that she can easily make the same menu suit the needs of the other members of her family. Foods suitable for children are especially desirable for older people because of their simplicity and digestibility.

Members of the family doing hard work require larger quantities of foods which can be supplied easily by increasing cereals, bread, syrups, sweets, and meats. However, don't forget that teen age boy who fairly eats you out of house and home and rightly so! Boys and girls in the teens require large amounts of food to meet the needs of their body for the increased growth at this time.

Children's food should be simple and nourishing. A child's daily requirement of a quart of milk, an egg, two vegetables besides potatoes, and two fruits, one of them orange or tomato juice (using twice as much tomato juice as orange juice) should be used as the basis in planning family meals. Besides this a whole grain cereal or bread and butter at every meal and plenty of water will not only give the children health but be just the foods to use for grandpa, dad, and mother.

Meals around the clock are included in the following suggestions for the whole family: For breakfast serve sliced oranges, cracked wheat cereal, bacon egg nests, toast, cocoa for the children and coffee for grownups. Dinner might include baked fish, mashed potatoes, carrots and peas, bread and butter, chocolate cornstarch pudding, milk for the children and coffee for the adults. And then for supper try cheese souffle, vegetable salad on raw shredded cabbage (chopped raw cabbage sandwiches may take its place for the very young children), toast, canned fruit, shortcake, and milk for all.

"ELECTRIC EYE" PLAYS PART IN PROGRAM TO ASSURE GENUINE SYRUP FOR HOME USE

In the Spring, the thoughts of any city dweller who has been fortunate enough to enjoy a "sugaring off," return lovingly to dreams of the sugar bush.

To those fortunates—and to many others, it will be interesting to learn that the photo-electric cell (electric eye to you) has entered New York State's picturesque maple products industry.

With many more farmers grading their maple syrup to standards set by the Department of Agriculture and Markets, to satisfy a growing demand for the pure product, the Department laboratories at Albany are using the "electric eye" to obtain the exact colors in the bottles of maple grading fluids. "Absolute accuracy" has been ordered in grading devices.

It is gratifying to note that the grading sets are sold by the state department to producers for the actual cost of manufacture, just 50 cents each. Generally they retain the exact colors of the three grades only one season.

A set consists of four bottles in a wooden framework.

Three of the bottles contain liquids of varying shades, filled with syrup to be matched in color with one of the other three. The lightest colored syrup, if it meets all other requirements, is graded as "fancy." Slightly darker is graded number one and still darker is graded number two.

Graded syrup, which is sold without adulteration of any kind, is in growing demand, judging from reports by producers and their requests for the compact grading sets.

Although sap pails were out early this year, many bushes being tapped by February 15, the flow of sap was light because of the mild weather. Another run of sap was anticipated, with cold freezing nights and warm sunny days in March.

Think of the early scramble in the sugar bush, the pails dangling from the trees, the chilly workers huddled around the fire in the hut where the sap is boiling down, and the "electric" eye grading precautions—think of all this when you buy a little jug of syrup for these waffles of special morning pancakes.

Maple icing is delicious too, and dresses up even the every-day, one-egg cake. Just boil the syrup until it spins a thread, being careful not to overcook, and pour it slowly on the stiffly beaten white of one or more eggs, beating steadily. This icing can be spread almost immediately, and has its own distinctive flavor.

Although maple syrup and sugar are in the stores all the year round, maple-flavored desserts seem to taste best in the Spring, particularly when the sap is running.

Luscious Dessert

With modern refrigeration, maple-flavored parfait is delicious and easy to make. Pour one-half cup of hot (not boiling) maple syrup slowly over the beaten yolks of four eggs. Cook over a low fire until the mixture begins to coat a spoon. Chill in the refrigerator, add a dash of salt and one-half teaspoon vanilla.

Whip one and one-half cups heavy cream and fold the maple mixture into this. One-half cup chopped nuts may be added. If refrigerator trays are not available, freeze in a mould, surrounded by packed ice.

FLOPS AS DOG CATCHER

COQUILLE, Ore. — (INS) — Dog-catcher Jack Ferris was in the "dog-house" after his first day of work for the city. He caught six dogs and locked them in the newly-opened dog pound. Five of the dogs chewed through their ropes and escaped. The sixth was stolen from a locked cage. Ferris announced he will keep dogs in a shed at his home hereafter instead of on city property.

The Garden Column

By James H. Burdett
Director National Garden Bureau

Most Widely Grown Flower

The flower probably most widely grown in the gardens of the United States is the portulaca, a first cousin of the worst weed in our gardens, purslane. Portulaca is a true succulent, with unlimited resistance to hot sun and dry air, yet ability to stand any amount of water as well.

Plant breeders have worked on it for more than a hundred years, improving the size of its flowers and the brilliance of their colors. Single and double forms now exist in white, yellow, pink and scarlet. One plant usually consists of six to eight sprawling stems, each of which develops a terminal cluster of many buds. They open in succession, giving a continuous show of color from mid-June until killing frost.

A sandy soil in full sun is best for this flower. Give it the hot, dry spot in your garden where it is difficult to grow other things. For front yard plantings, where the heat is reflected from pavement and building, it should do well. Water copiously once a week. Do not sow before the ground is warm.

Annals for the Flower Show

Good subjects for display in flower shows are found among annuals which are seldom used for that purpose. For example, the annual sunflowers, especially the new dwarf chrysanthemum flowered strain; the annual chrysanthemum, notably Morning Star, the largest of all; Calendula, the Russian statice Suworowii, and the Sweet Sultan, or centaurea imperialis. All show flowers should be grown with plenty of room for their roots to feed in, without competition from weeds or other plants. By reducing the number of flowers to a plant, larger blossoms may be produced.

A Lovely Creeper

Anagallis coerulea, the blue pimpernell, is a dwarf creeper with trailing stems with blossoms of a real turquoise blue. It should have a warm, sunny place and the seeds should be sown after the ground warms up, in the place where the plants are to grow. They flower freely and spread rapidly.

Nasturtiums Like Some Shade

Nasturtiums are among the tenderest of annual flowers, and should never be sown until all danger of frost is over. Yet they do not like the hot sun, and are likely to thrive better in light shade in a place where they can be well watered. The new fragrant double strains have awakened new interest in this family. If you have tried some of the new hybrids with indifferent success do not let that discourage you from trying them again, especially the newest dwarf flowering type. They are being constantly improved.

Pyrethrums Are Improved

Double pyrethrums are offered this year in strains of pink, red, salmon and white. There are also much improved single strains of rose, ruby and white. The pyrethrums, or "painted daisies," are among the most satisfactory perennials. They are easily grown from seed, and come into blossom with the tall iris, continuing until the perennials have finished. If they are cut back then, they will give a second crop of bloom. Desirable specimens are easily multiplied by root division. The new types make the family all the more interesting.

A Fine New Marigold

Marigold Golden Eagle is a new introduction this year which many judges esteem highly. It is an improvement in Guinea Gold, with a deeper color, quite free from the marigold odor, and producing 100 per cent double flowers of the carnation type. When marigolds of this type are used as cut flowers, it is difficult to distinguish them from carnations, though of course no carnation ever had such coloring.

Early Hardy Asters

While most of the autumn flowering hardy asters have been bred from American wild flowers, much attention is being given abroad to an early flowering European species, the amellus strain. Hybrids of this species bloom in July and August, and produce bushy plants covered with small flowers. They are easily grown from seed.

Try These for Fine Flavor

Those who like the subtle flavor imparted to cooking when herbs are used, should also grow three root crops which are highly esteemed by good judges. These are celeriac, root parsley and leeks. Celeriac is also called root celery; it has a celery-like flavor, but is always cooked, and is considered to surpass by far cooked celery. Likewise the root parsley, cooked with stews, imparts a super-parsley flavor. These are long-season root crops, which should be sown early and harvested in the early fall. They keep well in storage.

Leeks, which belong to the onion family, do not make bulbs. They resemble green onions, but are several times as large, and are never eaten raw. Their flavor is like the onion, but with a difference over which enthusiasts rave. There is a special technique in growing leeks. Sow the seed in a nursery row, then transplant the plants when they are as large as a pencil, using this method: Make a hole with a dibber about four inches deep, and an inch in diameter. Drop the plants in with just enough earth to cover the roots, but do not fill the hole further. It takes about four months to mature the crop.

Sweet Corn Goes Hybrid

First generation hybrid sweet corn is becoming almost as popular as the hybrid field corn which is so widely planted on the farms. Yields averaging 25 per cent greater are produced by the sweet corn hybrids. Many of them are bred with power to resist Stewart's disease, and give a crop in localities where this pest is prevalent and where standard strains might fail. The first generation hybrid is distinctly a product of scientific breeding. Two parents strains are chosen, each for a quality different from the other; and they are planted in alternate rows. The tassels of the mother strain are removed, so that pollen falls from the father strain only. The hybrid grains which the mother plants bear show a combination of both parents, plus a most exceptional vigor and yield. But these grains, if sown in turn, will not reproduce their kind, but will show a sad mixture. Both parent strains must be grown each year, for breeding purposes only.

FUR TRAPPERS HAVE BOOM

SOUTH BEND, Wash.—(INS)—Fur trappers in this section fared better during the 1936-37 season than they had for many years past, according to Fred Hjort, buyer. Chief among the fur-bearing animals which fell victim to trappers during the season were mink and muskrat, with raccoons a close third.

BEAUTY WINNER REBELS

ESSEX, Mass.—(INS)—"I'm going to stay home," says Miss Catherine Rogers, 19, Essex, winner of a beauty contest here, in refusing to accept offers to appear on the stage or in night clubs. "I don't want to dance in a night club all dressed up in tights and fans and bubbles."

HOLLYWOOD—Life is better in the movies, finds Dorothy Lamour.

As a female Tarzan in "Jungle Princess," she hunted and fished for her food. But when she wandered away from location and dropped a hook in Malibu lake, a game warden put her under arrest for fishing out of season. In the justice court at Calabasas, she paid a $50 fine and returned to the "High Wide and Handsome" film troupe just in time to forestall searching parties.

As a birthday gag Harmon O. Nelson hired a boy from a messenger service to call Bette Davis every half hour and sing "Happy Birthday to You". When this had gone on for some time, Bette asked the boy if he wouldn't please stop. "I'd like to," he replied. "I'm getting tired of it myself, but I've been paid to keep on."

To Michael Whalen befell the unusual experience of getting two broken fingers from a kick in the chin. The actor and another, George Saunders, were staging a fight for the picture, "Escape From Love". Whalen was supposed to receive a kick in the chin. He toppled backwards, fell upon his outstretched hand, and broke his first and third fingers. The injury is being written into the script.

Answering Your Questions! Christine Love, New York City: I don't know as he'll get the part, but Douglass Montgomery is so keen to play Ashley Wilkes in "Gone With the Wind" that he is bombarding Director Cukor with wires.

To 30 youngsters, Cary Grant is a hero. He hired two buses, sent the kids to the circus at his expense, and gave them spending money for peanuts and lemonade. A trained nurse and two other women chaperoned the party.

Add strange contract clauses, that of Harriet Hilliard, who has an arrangement whereby R-K-O sends her two pictures every day of her baby in New York. It was the only way she would agree to leave her five-month-old son for long enough to play a part in "New Faces of 1937".

Chatter... Ice skater Jack Dunn is issuing invitations to a "beetle and bottle" party, Hollywood's first. His yard is infested with beetles, so he'll pair off his guests, give the woman a searchlight and the man a bottle and award a prize to the team who catches the most beetles... When screwier ideas are thought up, Hollywood will think them... A Trocadero four some the other night included Anita Colby, Walter Kane, Buddy Rogers and Mary Brian. Remember when Buddy and Mary were supposed to be romancing?... Groucho Marx is so tired of it all that he'll live clear across the island from Honolulu on his trip to Hawaii... Mickey Rooney promoted a dance at the Rancho Country club. His orchestra played and he picked the stars for tickets... The Warner press department reports that Billy and Bobby Mauch see "The Prince and the Pauper" for the first time when they are New York hosts to 250 editors of grammar and high school newspapers... The Lewis Stone boat, the Serena, is sold and he'll build a racing sloop... That was Allan Christie with Patricia Ellis at the Club Ball... And Brian Donlevy, the big kid, got bitten by a monkey at the circus.

SUNDAY DINNER Suggestions

By ANN PAGE

ALL cuts of veal are a good value this week while other meats with the exception of fresh shoulders and hams are on the expensive list. Poultry is still moderate in price and fish should be very reasonable.

Butter, after its flurry up and down is back to its average level. Eggs at wholesale have been slightly cheaper but not enough to reduce retail.

Asparagus and lettuce are the most attractively priced green vegetables. Green beans are again high. Garden rhubarb is gradually replacing the hothouse variety. Other fruits and vegetables are about as they have been.

Here are three dinner menus planned to fit different needs and pocketbooks.

Low Cost Dinner

Veal Pot Pie with Vegetables and Biscuit Crust
Coke Slaw
Bread and Butter
Coffee Gelatin Soft Custard
Tea or Coffee Milk

Medium Cost Dinner

Braised Rump of Veal

DESIRABLE RECIPES

Tomato Jelly Salad

This is a good choice for Spring, and may be used for party luncheons. Four teaspoons gelatine, one-half cup cold water, three cups stewed tomatoes, one-half bay leaf, two slices onion, two whole cloves, one teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, one-eighth teaspoon paprika.

Soak gelatine in the cold water five minutes. Cook tomatoes, bay leaf, cloves, salt, sugar and onion together for 10 minutes. Add gelatine and mix thoroughly. Strain.

Turn into a mold which has been dipped in cold water, or rubbed slightly with salad oil. Chill. When ready to serve, slide from mold and garnish with lettuce hearts or watercress. Serve with mayonnaise.

Apricot Sauce

Did you know that apricots are full of Vitamin C, which keeps the skin healthy, even in windy weather, and equally rich in Vitamin A, a quality which helps to promote buoyant health? Dried apricot sauce is inexpensive and it will dress up any simple dessert. Serve it over the children's cornstarch or chocolate pudding.

Wash and put through the food chopper one pound of dried apricots. Cover with one quart of hot water and cook until soft. Add one cup of sugar, stir until the sugar is dissolved, then rub through a sieve.

If a very special sauce is desired, add one-half to one cup of marmalade, or crushed pineapple.

Orange Sauce

Another delicious recipe utilizes orange juice, and yields about one cup of rich sauce, which may be stored for later use: One-half cup sugar, two teaspoons cornstarch, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one cup orange juice. Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt. Stir in orange juice, which has been heated. Cook five to eight minutes, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens.

Salmon Leaf with Apples

Apples balance meat and fish dishes splendidly. The fruit juices serve to soften the meat fibers and enhance their flavor. This recipe will be a "repeater" once it is tried.

Two cups baked, canned salmon (one pound can); one cup cracker crumbs, one teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, two eggs, four medium-sized apples.

Quarter, core, but do not peel apples. Boil until tender in one-third cup water. While cooking apples, flake the salmon, add the crumbs, salt, paprika and beaten eggs. Remove the skins from apples, cut in small pieces and add apples and juice to salmon mixture. Place in well-greased mold and bake in moderate oven for 40 minutes (350 to 357 degrees).

Do not try to remove this from the mold immediately. Let stand a few minutes after removing from oven. Serves six.

Pears and Lamb

Apples, pineapple and even bananas are familiar fruit with meat, but pears are a fresh and novel addition to the roast menu. This recipe requires:

One rolled lamb shoulder, one can pears, three-fourths cup grated cheese (may be omitted), cloves, salt and pepper.

Wipe meat with a damp cloth. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Stick a few cloves in the meat. Place roast on a small rack and roast in a very moderate oven (300 to 350 degrees) for two and one-half to three hours, or until tender. Thirty minutes before the meat is done, place drained pear halves in pan around the roast. Cover the pears with grated cheese and brown.

GREAT GUNS!

That is the talk all over Europe, their voices speak murder and destruction.

Great Guns! also was the exclamation of Mrs. Brown as she heard the news that her husband had just met with a serious accident that left her and her children penniless.

Great Guns! in both cases, spoke the same message—Horror and Calamity.

Something must be done to silence the former Great Guns. Something has been done to help silence the latter Great Guns. If the Browns had been protected with life and accident insurance much of the horror would have been taken out of those Great Guns!

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT SHRINE AFFAIR

First Function of Social Nature
To Be Held at Doylestown
Tomorrow Night

HAVE A FINE PROGRAM

DOYLESTOWN, Apr. 22.—Bucks county's recently organized Shrine Club has announced plans for its first social function to be held in the Doylestown Armory tomorrow night. The club was organized with W. Carlisle Hobensack, of Doylestown, as the first president. The club was organized for the purpose of bringing Lu Lu Temple Shrine, of Philadelphia, and its activities to the Bucks county members and their families.

All members of Lu Lu and their families living in Bucks county and members of other Masonic bodies are invited to the affair on April 23. The program will be one of the most colorful in the history of the county and will include a street parade to include the famous Lu Lu Temple uniformed band of 75 pieces, Lu Lu Temple patrol of 65 men, and Lu Lu Temple choir of 40 voices.

There will be an elaborate program in the Armory after the parade, at eight p. m., at which time Chief Burgess George S. Hotchkiss, of Doylestown, will welcome the Shriners to Doylestown. There will be an introduction of distinguished guests by Noble Hobensack, the president, and an address by William Heim, of Philadelphia, illustrious Potentate of Lu Lu Temple Shrine.

In addition to President Hobensack, other officers of the new Shrine Club are as follows: Vice-president, Howard Moyer, Quakertown; secretary, Walter M. Carwithen, Doylestown; treasurer, W. Hallen of Minneapolis, president of the Evangelical Free Churches of America. Dr. Hallen said he could not attribute the decline in religious and moral observances to any one thing, but said it "is just the trend of the times."

CORONATION TO COST TAXPAYERS 2 1/4 MILLIONS

But Untold Millions Will Be Netted From Vast Crowds

ABBEY IS ENLARGED

Note: International News Service herewith presents the sixth of a series of articles dealing with every aspect of the forthcoming coronation of King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth of England. Previous articles have described the elaborate coronation service ritual and the regalia. The sixth article deals with the cost of the crowning.—INS.

By Charles A. Smith

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1937)

LONDON, Apr. 22 — (INS) — It will cost the British taxpayers more than two and a quarter million dollars to put the crown on the head of King

George VI. in Westminster Abbey May 12.

On the other side of the ledger, the country will net untold millions from the vast crowds expected to flock to the capital from abroad during coronation week.

Official figures made available by the Treasury revealed George VI.'s coronation will be the costliest on record.

Even the grandiose celebrations attending the crowning of the fourth George, in 1821, hailed at that time by a marveling public as the ninth wonder of the world and the talk of the country for months, did not cost as much.

Total cost of the crowning to the State will be approximately $2,270,000. Actually $2,620,000 will be required, but the Treasury will recoup $350,000 from the sale of seats in official stands erected along the route.

The net figure of $2,270,000 compares with the mere $1,191,190 spent on the coronation of George IV., in 1821, the previous high, and the record low of $211,490 expended on the crowning of William IV. in 1831.

Coronation of George V., the present monarch's father, in 1911, set the nation back $925,000 and that of Edward VII. in 1902, $965,000.

The greatly increased cost of preparing Westminster Abbey as the scene for the crowning is chiefly responsible for the rise, according to the Treasury spokesman.

The estimate submitted by the Office of Works, Government department chiefly concerned in the coronation preparations, shows that the preparation of the abbey, construction of the annex at the side of the abbey, and erection of official stands along the route will cost $1,770,000, less the $350,000 recoverable from the sale of seats, as compared with $165,000 for the coronation of King George in 1911.

The department explained: "There are a number of reasons for the increased cost. First there is the advance in the cost of labor and materials since 1911. Then there is work for this coronation which has never been done before.

"Increasing the accommodation inside the abbey to nearly 8,000, about 1,000 more than in 1911, makes the work more intricate, and adds to the cost considerably. Sound amplification and radio broadcasting arrangements are two other new items.

"Decorations along the line of route of the procession, flood-lighting and the decorations of public buildings in London and other cities have never before been undertaken by the government."

Half a million dollars of the total expenses will be incurred by the Royal Household, which will have to take care of the entertainment of royal and other family guests from abroad. The Royal Household's half million dollars is an increase of fifty thousand dollars over the last coronation.

The department of the Earl Marshal, chief of State officials in charge of the ceremony, takes twenty thousand dollars in expenses, an increase of $2,500. The War Office will take five thousand dollars, the Air Ministry $2,500, the Foreign Office $15,000, and the Navy Department $115,000. Most of this money will go in the official entertainment of visiting delegations.

To lighten the burden on the taxpayer, the total cost is being divided so that $760,000 will be borne in the present financial year and $1,560,000 in the next financial year.

In addition to these official expenses, coming from the national Treasury, many million dollars will be expended by individuals, such as peers and peeresses, for the provision of robes, jewelry, carriages, and other items in connection with their attendance at the abbey ceremony.

There have been murmurings in several quarters at what is described as the colossal cost of officially putting the King on his throne.

Generally, however, the country appears to feel that the expenditure is worth while because of the increased trade and the many millions which visitors are expected to spend.

Note: The seventh article in this series will describe in detail the decoration of Westminster Abbey for the crowning ceremony.—INS.

RESCUERS NEARLY KILLED BY BLAST

LEADVILLE, Colo. — (INS) — Five men who carried Eugene Colman, 36, mortally injured from a mine into which he had fallen learned later that they had escaped death by a hair's breadth.

Colman was lighting the fuse on a dynamite charge when he fell down an ore chute. The fuse missed fire, however, and the blast did not occur. Had it done so, the rescuers would have been buried beneath tons of rock.

The injured man, a carloader in the Climax Molybdenum Mine at Climax, Colo., died an hour and a half after he was brought to the surface.

GEORGE SCHOOL NINE WINS FROM GERMANTOWN

GERMANTOWN, Apr. 22—George School's invading batsmen notched their third triumph of the season here Tuesday afternoon, pounding out a 12-3 decision over a bewildered Germantown Friends nine.

Sixteen hits, including three home runs, four doubles and a triple, rattled off the Georgians' bats during the course of the game while the Germantown lads were being held to three safeties by two visiting hurlers. Captain Brint Hood, with a four-bagger, a double and a single, Eddie Wagg, of Lambertville, with the same total, and Taylor Winner, of Trenton, with a homer and a triple, paced the winners' heavy attack. Four of the invaders collected two bingles. Charley McCall and Bob Haberman shared the mound duties for the Georgians, and between them let the locals down with the three scattered hits.

Coach J. B. Shane's Brown and Buff batsmen picked up a one-run lead in the first inning, and were never headed thereafter. Three markers were added on three doubles in the second, four on two homers in the third, and single counters in the fifth and sixth frames. Just to keep things going, Hood slammed his homer in the last stanza with Wagg on base to bring in the winners' final two runs.

HOGS CAN BITE

HARRODSBURG, Ky.—(INS)—The moral of this story is: Hogs do bite, especially when you molest their youngsters. Willie Mershon, of near Salvisa, was attacked by a hog while he was attempting to separate it from young pigs. Mershon won out, but suffered a badly torn hand when the hog bit him.

THRUSHES ON DISPLAY

DEPLORE GRASS FIRES WHICH HARM THE GAME

EDGELEY, Apr. 22—The regular meeting of Edgeley Rod & Gun Club was held Monday evening at the fire company headquarters. President Elwood Britton presided.

Fred Hibbs, chairman of the game committee, reported that numerous grass fires in this locality are from a hunter's point of view a detriment due to the fact that breeding season is here.

During quarantine of dogs in Bucks County dog owners in this vicinity are co-operating well.

The members honored their fellow sportsman member, the late Lester Stackhouse, who was chairman of the forestry committee by bowing their heads for a period of one minute.

The 1937 outing was discussed. It will probably be held on a Sunday in September. A membership drive is being conducted by the club. The present membership now is 70.

Secretary J. Walker is endeavoring to have a speaker, Dr. Joseph Van Sant, Fox Chase, who has in his possession pictures taken on his big game trip. Dr. Van Sant describes in detail all events that take place in his pictures.

Refreshments will be served and all members are requested to invite a visitor.

WALLY DUSEK FLATTENED BY JOE COX AT ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Apr. 22—Dynamite Joe Cox, Cleveland's gift to the wrestling game, won the feature bout on Promoter Johnny Ipp's weekly mat show at the Arena last night when he pinned the shoulders of Wally Dusek, a cousin of the Omaha riot squad, twice in three falls.

Though Wally beat Cox for the first fall in 20 minutes 11 seconds, the latter disposed of the fellow from the famous wrestling family in nine minutes in their second trip to the mat, and in less than seven minutes in the deciding fall.

It was apparent that Dusek's victory in the first brush was strictly an accident, for up until the time he caught the Wily Cox with a body charge Joe was having things much to his liking.

Just when the fans began to wonder whether Wally might—even by accident—do what the other Dusek clan members could not accomplish, Cox turned on the heat. He applied a punishing Indian death lock, and might have won there and then had not the referee broken the grip because Dynamite Joe was encroaching upon the ropes. Limping about the ring, Wally sought vainly to escape his relentless foe. Joe drove home several powerful forearm blows which annoyed Wally to such an extent that he sought to flatten Cox with a bull-like rush. Right there he made his biggest mistake, for Joe met him with an uppercut that landed flush on the jaw. Wally hit the canvas like a sack of potatoes and Joe pounced on him for the pin.

The third and last fall was all Cox. Joe used his elbows effectively even as he rested while Wally attempted to pin him with a cradle hold. Then three stout blows to the head sent Wally spinning around in the centre of the ring. Cox quickly sensed his opportunity and slammed Wally through the ropes twice. Warming to his task, Joe slung Wally through the ropes again and his head struck the corner post. That settled the argument, for Joe pinned him in the centre of the ring after pulling him back into the wrestling arena.

In the semi-windup Joe Dusek, youngest member of the famous family to create a name for himself, batted

NATTY FIREMEN

BOSTON—(INS)—The secret is out—why Boston's firemen are the nation's in the country. In the interim between answering fire alarms, they press their own uniforms. The firefighters have flat irons and ironing boards at the fire houses. It makes the uniforms last longer. The firemen get new trousers only once a year, and new overcoats every five years.

GIRLS PAY IN NEW "SIT-DOWNS" STRIKE

WARE, Mass.—(INS)—Something new in the way of "sit-down" strikes occurred here when an automobile in which two college students were taking their girl friends for a ride, stopped at a local gas station.

The boys locked the doors and told the girls they would have to buy five gallons of gasoline before they could get back in. The girls decided to try walking, but finally gave in and paid.

LAUNCHES FOR PEERS

LONDON—(INS)—Following a precedent set at the last two coronations, several peers have arranged to journey to Westminster Abbey by private launches on May 12. They will travel in their coronation robes, and after landing at Westminster Pier, will proceed through a subway which leads from the pier directly to the parliament building, from which the abbey can be reached.
